S. No. 2407

Introduced by Senator Franklin M. Drilon

EXPLANATORY NOTE

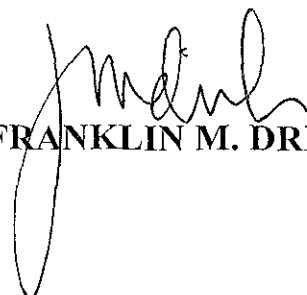

The first three months of the school year, June, July and August, are the peak periods for typhoons in the country. Thus, it has become impractical and unwise to commence the school year during the typhoon season as students, parents and school authorities have to deal with floods, landslides, diseases, lack of transportation, and damaged schoolbuildings. In the urban and metropolitan areas, traffic congestion becomes worse with the onset of the rainy season due to floods and bad road conditions.

Also, in flood-prone areas, schoolbuildings are used as evacuation centers. These facilities can be better put to use if they are not being utilized as classrooms and are ready and properly equipped for such emergency measures during the height of the rainy season.

This bill proposes the revision of the school calendar by transferring the commencement of the school year from June to September. By moving the school opening to September or about 3 months later, the country will avoid inconvenience and needless damage to life and property. In fact, the country can expect to realize untold savings in life and limb, manhours, health costs, and fuel, among others, with such proposal.

Revising the school calendar would benefit not only students, parents and school authorities but also the government and the economy.

Immediate approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
