OF THE PHILIPPINES
First Regular Session

SENATE

S. NO. 2579

RECEIVED BY:

Introduced by Senator Ralph G. Recto

Explanatory Note

Our Constitution mandates the State to defend the right of children to assistance, including proper care and nutrition, and special protection from all forms of neglect, abuse, cruelty, exploitation and other conditions prejudicial to their development. This provision of our supreme law illustrates the parens patriae concept or the power of the state to act as the parent of any child or individual who is in need of protection.

This constitutional mandate has spawned a number of legislation aimed at shielding our children against most forms of abuse, neglect and exploitation. However, the inadequacy of our laws becomes apparent in the case of street children, which continue to be a large societal blot in our efforts to safeguard the welfare of the youth. In fact, estimates in 1998 by the Department Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) reveal that around 220,000 street children roam the country's 65 major cities. The number could be more at present and no single government program seems to address the problem effectively.

It is in this area where the parens patriae concept in which the State acts as parent fails miserably. It is our contention that in this case, if the State alone cannot ensure the welfare of our children, particularly those who roam our streets, the private sector can be tapped to address a seemingly gargantuan social strain. This bill aims to strengthen the Barangay Council for the Protection of Children (BCPC), as a majority of street children still go home to poor communities within a barangay, according to ChildHope Asia Foundation, one of the leading NGOs helping our street Children. It is a preventive approach with a single purpose of eliminating the presence of street children in our cities and municipalities.

Aptly entitled the "Street Children Welfare Act of 2010," the bill also provides incentives to private individuals, corporations, non-governmental organizations or entities that offer much-needed facilities or services aimed at providing our street children short- and long-term refuge against the harsh realities of the streets, including donations to such endeavors. It allows these so-called "good Samaritans" to use the amount they allot on such facilities, services or donations as an allowable deduction in their gross income.

We cannot allow the plight of our street children to continue. Hence, the immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
