S. B. No. 2643

11 JAN 20 P4:01

RECEIVED BY:

Introduced by Senator Ralph G. Recto

Explanatory Note

One of the more serious problems besetting a developing nation such as the Philippines is a high unemployment rate. Official statistics as of October 2010 pegged the number of unemployed Filipinos to around 2.8 million, of which 80% or 2.3 million are between the ages of 15 to 34.

It becomes imperative, therefore, for the State to facilitate the generation of jobs for its citizens through any means that may be within its power. After all, one of the national government's mandates under the present Constitution is to promote full employment for Filipinos by encouraging the growth of the national economy through enterprise.

It is this same mandate that prompted Congress to enact three vital pieces of legislation that advance the welfare of the Filipino enterprise: Republic Act No. 6977 or the Magna Carta for Small Enterprises; RA 9178 or the Barangay Micro Business Enterprises Act of 2002; and RA 9501 or the Magna Carta for Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises.

These laws provide aid and incentives to more than 783,000 micro, small and medium enterprises (MSMEs), which according to latest data comprise 99.7% of all business enterprises in the Philippines.

Records show that in 2006, MSMEs employed a total of 3.3 million individuals, dwarfing that of large-scale industries which only generated 1.6 million jobs as of the same year. This fact is a testament to the ability of MSMEs to generate employment given the right conditions.

However, stringent regulatory requirements of both the local and national government inhibit the growth of the MSME sector. And unfortunately, most of those who are unable to comply with such painstaking requisites end up either closing shop or joining the informal sector or the underground economy.

This bill aims to prevent this situation from hindering the growth of MSMEs and instead encourage their development by providing more incentives to those who may generate employment by exploring their entrepreneurial spirit.

Aptly entitled "The Jobs Act of 2011," this bill also aims to stimulate the growth of MSMEs by exempting them from certain strict government regulation that would otherwise discourage their proliferation.

It also increases the threshold amount of the assets used in the classification of MSMEs to the following: from not more than P3 million to not more than P5 million for micro enterprises; from P3,000,001 to P15 million, the threshold amount for small enterprises is now from P5,000,001 to P15 million; while it remained the same for medium enterprises, from P15,000,001 to P100,000,000.

If enacted into law, micro enterprises – which comprise the bulk of MSMEs – will be exempted from income tax and the Minimum Wage Law, provided that they give their employees the same benefits given to any regular employee like social security and healthcare benefits. The bill also exempts micro, small and medium enterprises from Value-Added Tax (VAT) registration and Percentage Tax for whose annual gross selling price or gross value in money received from the sale, barter, or exchange of goods, as well as the annual gross receipts derived from the sale or exchange of services do not exceed Three Million Pesos (P3,000,000.00).

Moreover, registered small and medium enterprises which shall hire additional employees shall be allowed a deduction from its gross income in the amount of Forty Thousand Pesos (P40,000.00) for each new employee hired. The maximum allowable deduction is pegged at Eighty Thousand Pesos (P80,000.00) for two or more new jobs created.

This bill also encourages micro enterprises from the underground economy to join, or rejoin as the case may be, the formal sector.

In hindsight, MSMEs is probably the best way of generating much-needed employment in the country. It is therefore the responsibility of Congress to ensure their viability and continued growth.

In view of the foregoing, the passage of this bill is sincerely sought.
