EXPLANATORY NOTE

Article II, Section 18 of the 1987 Philippine Constitution declares that, "the State affirms labor as primary social economic force. It shall protect the rights of workers and promote their welfare." The highest law of the land guarantees workers' rights. Among these rights is their right for a living wage.

Due to inflation and other present economic realities, such as continuously rising prices of basic needs, the real value of government workers' salaries have significantly decreased. Salaries received by public sector employees are way behind the government's conservative estimate of the cost of living a family needs in order to survive.

The passage of the Salary Standardization Law 3 has not been enough to substantially address the situation. An employee with the compensation of Salary Grade I Step 1 currently receives P6,861.00 per month, far from the government's estimated cost of living of 28,710 per month. Even if employees receive the full implementation of SSL 3 (the last tranche will be on 2012), the minimum pay shall still only be P9,000.00. The situation of employees in local government units is far worse as they receive lower amount because SSL 3 continue to implement the policy of wage regionalization.

The current minimum pay reflects the dismal state of public sector workers. While executives and top officials of the government are enjoying various perks and privileges, oftentimes even unconscionable, the employees who are at the frontline of delivering services to the public, are living in abject poverty.

This bill seeks to address this inequality through providing a substantial salary increase, and in the process, bring employees closer to the State's assurance of a decent wage

In this regard, passage of this bill is earnestly sought.

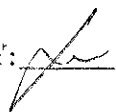

RAMON BONG REVILLA, JR.
