S. No. 537

INTRODUCED BY HON. MANUEL B. VILLAR JR.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

It is truly ironic that teachers in public and private institutions of higher learning who tutor and educate children whose parents can afford to send them to these schools very often cannot afford to have their own children go through college. Many of them scrimp, denying themselves of even the basic and ordinary needs of life in the hope that they too can send their children to good schools.

If government and private institutions of higher learning, because of their own financial limitations, cannot give their teachers decent pay to help them send their children to college, other remedies have to be resorted to. This bill seeks to provide one such remedy: exempt children of teachers in public and private secondary institutions of higher learning from paying tuition and other school fees when they enroll at the educational institutions where one or both of their parents are teaching.

This exemption actually constitutes an additional economic benefit extended by the institutions concerned to its own teachers. The scheme does not involve cash disbursements and loss of income on the part of the educational institution resulting from the exemption will not be substantial as to affect the financial viability of the institution. On the other hand, the educational institution will be more than compensated for in terms of a boost in the morale, loyalty and dedication to work of its teachers.

Approval of this measure is earnestly solicited.

MANUEL B. VILLAR, JR.
