EXPLANATORY NOTE

The National Government has been campaigning for poverty eradication of 32 million Filipinos in the poverty line. However, poverty, which resides mainly in the rural areas, cannot be eradicated simply with the influx of foreign investments and the revitalization of export-oriented industries. Without discounting the value of these efforts, their benefits seldom trickle down to the lowest levels of society. Poverty eradication can be better addressed if the government starts from the bottom, from the local economies growing upward to the national economy.

The rural banks play a major role in socio-economic development of the countryside, as more than eighty per cent (80%) of rural banks' clients are within the poverty line. They keep the rural sectors at pace with current economic trends and developments, injecting dynamism to the rural areas through the motion of entrepreneurship, food production, livelihood projects, values formation, training and new forms of economic activities in the provinces. They mobilize small savings and provide farmers, fishermen, microentrepreneurs, employees, market vendors and other rural workers access to credit in order to give them opportunity to improve the quality of their life by engaging in productive activities. Furthermore, the rural banks are the best antidotes to the usurious practices of informal moneylenders who charge exorbitant interest rates to the hapless borrowers.

The Rural Banks Act of 1992 or Republic Act No. 7353 was passed in recognition of the need to make credit available and accessible in the rural areas. It was a manifestation of government's sensitivity to the plight of the rural folks who can barely gain access to the financial services offered by banking institutions because of their economic status. Among the incentives granted were the exemption of rural bank owners from the ownership ceiling, exemption from publication requirement of bank, foreclosures and exemption from the payment of gross receipts tax. These measures were meant to enhance the operation of the rural banks after the financial turbulence of the mid-80's resulting from misguided government financial policies at that time.

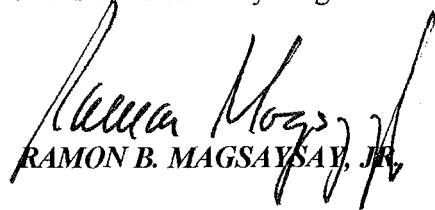

Due to political and economic crises, rural banks have not recovered, remained in the state where they were in the 1980's and the poverty in the countryside widened. Such a situation has a negative impact on key sections of our economy that needs immediate attention and our wavering support.

This amendatory bill aims to resolve the issues, plug the loopholes, decrease financial cost of borrowers and re-direct the flow of funds to the countryside that diluted the real intent of R.A. 7353. Some of the important features of the bill are as follows:

- That the compliance of the small credit allocation is full compliance of medium credit allocation as medium term borrowers rarely apply credit to rural banks,
- Incentive in the development of local economy to reach and decrease the cost of intermediation to the poor,
- Providing for collateral integrity on untitled lands,

- Increase of loan amount exempted from publication and registration fees passed on to the borrowers,
- Eliminate irritations on acquired lands in satisfaction of loans to decrease non-performing assets,
- Defer payment of capital gains tax upon consolidation until after sale to prevent double taxation,
- Loans granted by financial institutions to rural banks is compliance of Agri-Agra Law to propel funds to the rural areas,
- Extension of exemption from taxes, except income tax, to ten (10) years to decrease financial cost of borrowers and level the playing field,
- Exemption of withholding tax on deposits to redirect funds from urban to rural areas.

In view of the foregoing, the immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
