EXPLANATORY NOTE

The school is the center of the teaching and learning process. From the school emanates the generation of youth that will take leadership positions in the future and determine the fate of this country. For the pupils and teachers at the basic level, the school is proof they hold that government remains true to its commitment to provide free, quality accessible education. The school is in the heart of the education governance nexus.

The truism, however, seems to have been lost in the huge bureaucracy that has become the Department of Education, Culture and Sports. The 1987 Constitution provides in Section 1, Article XIV that:

“The State shall protect and promote the right of all citizens to quality education at all levels and shall take appropriate steps to make such education accessible to all.”

With this stated obligation on the part of the State, it has thus become imperative to revisit the governance of our basic education structure. The Department of Education needs a stricter focus on the demands of an effective, relevant and adequate educational system for our citizens. There is urgent necessity to enable a decentralized environment within the DepEd, so that those who are closer to the communities they serve – the division schools superintendents and the principals – can take a more responsible and accountable hand delivering educational programs, projects and services. By reorienting its present structure, removing the administrative burdens that pile at its Central Office and bringing policies right where it must be felt – in the school, it is hoped that we could achieve better outcomes in our education assessments.

Passage of this bill is earnestly requested.
