

THIRTEENTH CONGRESS OF THE REPUBLIC
OF THE PHILIPPINES
1ST REGULAR SESSION

SEP 21 P4:29

SENATE
S.B. NO. 1795

INTRODUCED BY SENATOR MAGSAYSAY, JR.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The information and communications technology (ICT) is a vital tool in the development of an electronic society. Being connected digitally provides us with easy access and fast links, thus, making the use of ICT highly essential in our economic growth, educational advancement, awareness enhancement, market facilitation and public participation.

The passage of Republic Act 8792, the E-Commerce Act, has liberalized the country from the confinements of the traditional way of transacting business and effecting communications. However, due to the dispersed attention of different agencies towards implementing its mandate, the country has lagged behind other Asian neighbors in terms of linking itself internally. Hence, it is but necessary to fortify the government's commitment to making the advantages of the ICT available to the Filipino people.

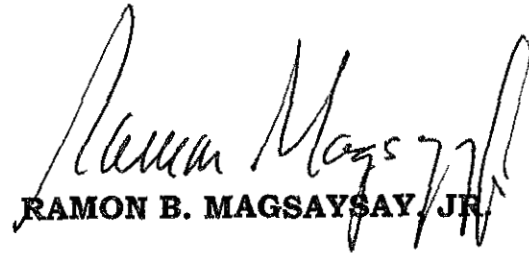

Issues on infrastructure, regulations, convergence, security, digital, divide, interoperability of laws, among others, must be focused on by a single department to intensify government initiatives to catch up with the rest of the wired world. Hence, the creation of a separate key department that will focus exclusively on the promotion of communication and information technology is deemed vital.

This bill seeks to transform and integrate the existing Department of Transportation and Communications, National Computer Center and other ICT functions of other key agencies into two separate departments, namely, the Department of Information and Communications Technology (DICT) which shall be the primary agency in charge of the promotion and development of integrated and strategic information and communications technology (ICT) systems and reliable and cost-efficient communications facilities and services, and the Department of Transportation which will concentrate on government programs and projects related to transportation.

This proposed integration of functions is in fact putting in place a systematic direction in our government bureaucracy rather than establishing an unnecessary addition to the existing ones.

As declared in Article II Section 24 of the Constitution, "The State recognizes the vital role of communication and information in nation-building. Therefore, it is in pursuance of this policy and the consideration of the above premises that the passage of this bill is earnestly sought.

RAMON B. MAGSAYSAY, JR.
