EXPLANATORY NOTE

At the heart of a strong justice system is the indispensable and complementary role of the State's prosecutorial and counseling arm. The National Prosecution Service, the Office of the Chief State Counsel, and the Office of the Ombudsman, are mandated and uphold the rule of law as a component of the justice system.

It is said to note, however, that our prosecutors and state counselors earn less than those in the Judiciary. Such situation has produced a migratory effect. After spending a few years in the NPS, the OCSC, or the OMB, they resign and join the ranks of the Judiciary. This is further aggravated by the imbalance between the number of prosecutors and state counselors with that of the number of regional and other trial courts in the country, resulting to a heavy workload. In short, our prosecutors and state counselors are overworked and underpaid.

This bill seeks to correct the aforementioned inequities. The increase in salaries and the granting of additional services and privileges to the members of the National Prosecution Service, the Office of the Chief State Counsel, and the Office of the Ombudsman, to place them at par with those in the Judiciary would deter the current practice of migration. Likewise, the proposed measure would dissuade the prosecutors and state counselors from being entangled in the web of corruption. Finally, this would benefit the entire justice system, for there would be a continuous supply of competent and dedicated lawyers from the Department of Justice and the Office of the Ombudsman servicing our court system.

It is for these reasons that approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
