Bill No. 1305

Introduced by Senator Francis G. Escudero

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The Revised Penal Code lists some minor felonies, offenses, and infractions which cause little or no damage to persons, property and community, and which are often motivated not by malice but by some psychological disorders that should be addressed with treatment, rather than with punishment.

One good example is vagrancy, penalized under Article 202 of the Revised Penal Code, which fails to see that vagrants are victims of poverty and the lack of opportunities for employment and access to decent standards of living and quality of life.

Aside from vagrancy are such felonies as simple disobedience to an agent of a person in authority, alarms and scandals, refusal of assistance, refusal to discharge elective office, abandonment of minor by a person entrusted with his custody and care and indifference of parents and premature marriages.

In the case of crimes of anticipation of duties of a public office, reckless imprudence and negligence respecting damage only to property, the applicable penalties are fines, indemnification, restitution, compensation and community service, rather than deprivation of liberty.

This bill seeks to decriminalize the above offenses in order to decongest the load of the justice system, allow our law enforcement officers to pay more attention to graver offenses, and improve the administration of justice in our land. This measure also seeks to give a more humane countenance on our justice system, which prioritizes the rehabilitation of the offender and acknowledges the value of every human life.

In view of the foregoing, early passage of this bill is earnestly requested.
