EXPLANATORY NOTE

Over the past few years, computers have become a common thread that ties together our education, work and home life. We live in a world where technology is rapidly increasing, and new discoveries are being made everyday. With computers touching nearly every facet of our lives, it is absolutely critical that computer education be available at all levels.

It is best to start them young. Although traditional teaching styles are still very effective and important to the development of a child into a successful student, enhanced computer literacy enables children to practice and develop a broader range of skills. It can help them learn, for example, about letters, numbers, shapes, colors, and rhythm. Good software can also help children develop their understanding of cause and effect, higher order problem solving, procedural thinking, and creative expression. As they master computers, children build positive attitudes toward technology that will pay dividends for the rest of their lives.

Computer technology when utilized correctly is an effective tool in enhancing the students' learning with the end view of having better educated and globally competitive labor force.

Hence, the inclusion of computer education as a separate subject at the grade school and high school level in all public and private educational institutions nationwide is no longer considered an option but rather a necessity long been deferred.

In view of the foregoing, approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
