

FOURTEENTH CONGRESS OF THE REPUBLIC) OF THE PHILIPPINES)

SENATE
S. No. 2270

RECEIVED

Introduced by Senator Miriam Defensor Santiago

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Webster's dictionary defines "disaster" as a sudden calamitous event producing great material damage, loss and distress, It is a disturbing fact that disasters have remained a constant problem in the transportation industry, be it air, land or sea. These tragedies cause much damage to lives and properties, with losses amounting to at least 2 to 3% of the country's gross domestic product (GDP) each year. Further, the economic losses are reflected mainly in the victim's productive year that are taken away by their untimely deaths. The death and injuries due to various accidents result in considerable waste of country's resources and cause grief to the family and friends of the victim.

Recent events have shown that the transportation industry has experienced several major catastrophes. In the land transportation sector, a public utility bus loaded with passengers was washed away into a river in Isabela province by rampaging floodwaters. The most recent tragedy that hit the transportation industry was the crashlanding into the waters of Manila Bay of a Laoag Airlines Fokker plane where at least fourteen (14) of its passengers perished.

The government has responded to every transportation disaster by forming fact-finding bodies to investigate the cause or causes of the accident. These bodies were tasked to pinpoint responsibility for such tragedies and review such regulations and policies to prevent similar incidents from happening in the future. However, the recent disasters are testaments to the inadequate response of government towards the prevention of similar catastrophes. These tragedies could have been avoided had government initiated proactive measures designed to ensure "safety consciousness" among the owners of public utilities as well as the regulatory agencies mandated to monitor their operations.

To advance transportation safety consciousness, there is an urgent need to create the National Transportation and Safety Board (NTSB) which shall be independent, non-regulatory agency shall undertake to ensure thorough and impartial investigations of transportation accidents. It shall be primarily responsible for the analysis, evaluation and prevention of air, highway and marine transportation accidents, to include railway and pipeline systems, for the effective promotion of safety and prevent loss of life and property. Briefly, the mission of this Board is to engage in the investigation and determine probable cause(s) of transportation accidents, the issuance of safety recommendations and special studies directed at preventing recurrence of such accidents and evaluating the effectiveness of concerned government agencies in preventing transportation accidents.

The creation of an independent government agency to promote transportation safety by conducting independent accident investigations and by formulating safety improvement recommendations has come of age in the Philippine transport system. As envisioned, the proper conduct of responsibilities assigned to this independent Board requires vigorous investigation of major accidents involving all types of public utility vehicles or vessels regulated by other agencies of government. It demands continual review, appraisal, and assessment of the operating practices and regulations of all such agencies. It also envisions calling for the making of conclusions and recommendations that may be critical of or adverse to any such agency and its officials.

No government agency can properly perform such function unless it is totally separate and independent from any other department, bureau, commission, or agency. The current regulatory agencies involved in the transport industry cannot be expected to conduct a thorough and impartial investigation on any major accident for the simple reason that such agencies may be themselves liable due to the improper or lark of implementation of pertinent laws, rules and regulations regarding safety.

The importance and necessity of safe transportation system in our country cannot be over emphasized. The enactment of this measure is expected to ensure that all modes of transportation in the Philippines are conducted safely. We believe that the NTSB will be an effective vehicle for the realization of such a need. Therefore, the passage of this bill is strongly recommended.

This is a senate counterpart bill to the one filed in the House of Representatives by Rep.

Rozzano Rufino B. Biazon.
