EXPLANATORY NOTE

Article II, Section 15 of the Constitution provides that the State shall protect and promote the right to health of the people and instill health consciousness among them. In pursuit of this policy, it is the objective of the Philippine Health Insurance Corporation (Phil Health) to continuously endeavor to improve its benefit package to meet the needs of its members. It is in this light that this bill seeks to provide coverage for the diagnostic services for breast and cervical cancer.

Breast cancer and cervical cancer are the leading causes of cancer and cancer deaths in Filipino women. The Philippines is ranked first in breast cancer incidence in Asia and has a higher prevalence rate than those in several Western countries, including Spain, Italy, and most Eastern European countries. Based on the most recent data, relative survival rates for women diagnosed with breast cancer are: 88 percent at 5 years after diagnosis, 80 percent after 10 years, 71 percent after 15 years and 63 percent after 20 years. From 1990 to 2002, death rates have decreased. The decline has been attributed to both improvements in breast cancer treatment and early detection.<sup>1</sup>

Cervical cancer, also known as cancer of the cervix, is the second leading cause of death among Filipino women. According to the 2005 Philippine Cancer Facts and Estimates, 7,277 new cases and 3,807 deaths due to cervical cancer were estimated to have occurred. This meant that there were approximately 10 Filipino women dying each day due to cervical cancer. This is mainly due to late detection and lack of awareness of the disease among Filipino women.<sup>2</sup>

Based on the above data, it is safe to deduce that there is a direct correlation between the time of detection and the odds for survival of women afflicted with these killer diseases. Thus, it is but urgent to include the periodic diagnostic services for breast cancer and cervical cancer in the benefit package under the PhilHealth. The intent of this measure rests on the premise that preventive and promotive health services are essential for reducing the need and spending for personal health services.

In view of the foregoing, immediate approval of this measure is earnestly sought.
