EXPLANATORY NOTE

Internet technology has gone a long way after its first invention in the 1960s as part of the United States military tool for research and intelligence purposes. More than four decades later, it evolved from a basic chatting service to exchange information and scientific researches into a giant cybermall offering services and products of all shapes and sizes from all over the world.

The possibilities of internet technology are almost boundless and limitless. Yet, with all its infinite possibilities come the limitless problems and conflicts. One of the most common and expensive of these problems is Cyber Squatting, an act of acquiring a domain name in the cyberspace before the rightful and legitimate owner of a trademark or a personal/business name can do so. This has led to the unscrupulous practice of cyber squatters selling the domain back to the legitimate owner but with an appalling price that runs into millions of pesos.

Cyber Squatting usually affects businesses and their trade names causing confusion to their clients and even diverting them away. According to the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO), a specialized agency of the United Nations dedicated to developing a balanced and accessible international intellectual property (IP) system, cyber squatting is on the increase all over the globe and it often entails bad faith intent by the cyber squatter to profit from the domain name acquired.

This measure is hereby proposed to ensure the integrity of domain names. It intends to help the legitimate owners stake a rightful claim to their domain names and preclude bad faith registration of the same.

It is hoped that through this bill, personal/business names and trademarks will be protected against fraudulent individuals or groups that cause identity confusion and intellectual property infringement with their trade names.

In view of the foregoing, approval of this bill is earnestly requested.
