Senate Bill No. 684

RECEIVED

INTRODUCED BY SEN. JINGGOY EJERCITO ESTRADA

EXPLANATORY NOTE

More than insufficiency of resources, lack of innovation in harnessing collective non-pecuniary resources to come up with basic programs that seek to take care of the country's health needs explains poor delivery of basic health services as well as failure to critically respond to basic health concerns on the part of the government.

Indeed, budgetary constraints should never be an excuse for failure to handle important governmental undertakings, such as health.

For instance, breast cancer has long been a concern since time immemorial and yet the government has not come up with decisive policy direction, let alone concrete plan of action to address the same. It may sound alarming, noting that breast cancer is the leading common cancer among Filipino women and second among both sexes, but it is muted by the fact that no programs are set in place at the moment.

The proposed measure which focuses on addressing breast cancer is a crucial starting point in our joint quest for meaningful response mechanism without necessary use of huge resources. Although it may sound resource exhaustive, as it seeks to establish breast care centers in every region nationwide, it actually utilizes less resources since these centers will merely be attached departments to existing regional hospitals of the national government. In other words, it creatively re-channels existing government funds, instead of wasting additional ones, to respond to urgent needs.

Using cost-benefit analysis, these centers once established will greatly benefit millions of Filipinos who suffer, and who are about to suffer from breast cancer unless timely intervention is implemented. They will spearhead sustained information campaign to raise public awareness on the disease, take the lead in providing affordable services in disease prevention and consequently change existing mindset on how breast cancer should be approached and prevented.

Our people's health largely depends on important legislative measures. If only to abate a disease that has long caused sufferings to millions of people, the immediate enactment of the proposed measure should never be an issue.
