EXPLANATORY NOTE

The 1972 Constitution, Article XII-C, Section 10 provides:

Section 10. No elective public officer may change his political party affiliation during his term of office and no candidate for any elective public office may change his political party affiliation within six months immediately preceding or following an election.

However, the prohibition on turncoatism was removed in the 1986 Constitution. Today, turncoatism is very rampant and is blurring the Philippine political party system. Republic Act No. 7941, also known as the "Party List System Act", Section 3 defines what a political party is. It states:

A political party refers to an organized group of citizens advocating an ideology or platform, principles and policies for the general conduct of government and which, as the most immediate means of securing their adoption, regularly nominates and supports certain of its leaders and members as candidates for public office.

However, in reality, most political parties in the Philippines are not composed of citizens advocating an ideology or platform or principles and policies for the general conduct of government." More often than not, traditional politicians who were not nominated by their original party to the position that they desire easily change political parties, even if their new party espouses an opposite belief as compared to their original party.

This weakens our political party-system. People are now confused as to who are the genuine majority or the genuine opposition party. This bill seeks to penalize political butterflies and restore belief in our political party system.¹
