EXPLANATORY NOTE

This one is for Ripley's.

In this time and at this age, believe it or not, there is not a single municipal trial court operating in the 18 municipalities in the province of Sulu.

The province is entitled to four regional trial courts. Not one is sitting in the province on a regular basis. The judges more often than not hold sessions in the City of Zamboanga.

There is, thus, no effective judicial remedy to redress the grievances of the people of Sulu.

The appalling absence of trial courts in Sulu and its municipalities bespeaks the troublous times besetting Sulu.

Without trial courts to arbitrate grievances according to the Rule of Law, the Rule of the Gun will prevail as it seems to prevail today in the province. Serious threats to the security and the safety of the populace of Sulu, including kidnappings, abductions, ambushes, and outright killings, appear to be horrendously common place in the province.

Nobody needs an Einstein to explain why judicial postings in such a province are not an attractive proposition at all. Hence, this attempt to provide incentives to attract qualified judges to accept appointments to and hold regular sessions permanently in the province and municipalities concerned.

The incentives involve doubling the salaries, emoluments, allowances, perks and benefits of the trial court judges for provinces such as Sulu and other local government subdivisions that are similarly situated. Also, security details of police officers or troops of the armed forces at the choice of the Judges concerned shall be provided. The costs of such security details shall be borne by the judicial department and the local government units concerned in equal amounts.

It is understood that the judges of all levels of trial courts assigned to Sulu and other local government units plagued with similar security problems described above shall benefit from the bill's package of incentives ONLY if they sit and hold regular court sessions in their places of assignment.

In the event that the judges so assigned to these perilous posts get killed in the line of duty, their heirs shall receive double the benefits that the heirs of judges who are assigned in other places are entitled to under the law.

Immediate passage of this bill is requested.
