EXPLANATORY NOTE

The number of Filipinos below poverty line continues to bloat each year, which makes the revision and strict implementation of government policies on social protection, critical, to address poverty in the next few years.

The problem on poverty has been attributed to different reasons, and one of those is the cost of basic human needs, which never fails to burden the Filipino consumers every year.

Electricity is an indispensable part of our everyday life. According to the study conducted by International Energy Consultants, and reported out by Meralco and the Philippine Chamber of Commerce (PCCI), our country has the most expensive electricity in the whole of Asia. It was further revealed that with average retail rate of electricity of 18.1 US cents per kilowatt/hour in the Philippines, it has eased out Japan at the top of having the most expensive electricity. The study also found that household consumers in the Philippines pay highest at an average of P10 per kilowatt/hour, shouldering the biggest burden of high electric rates. The high cost of electricity in the Philippines was traced by the group to the fact that all costs — from producing power to distribution and taxes — are passed on to consumers.

It is noteworthy that under our law, systems loss obtained from illegal use/theft or failure in the administration or distribution of electricity, is passed on to consumers, which obviously is due to inefficiency of electric providers, hence, must be borne by them.

With this, it becomes necessary to reconsider Republic Act No. 7832, otherwise known as "Anti-Electricity and Electric Transmission lines/materials Pilferage Act of 1994," which bears the provision on the recovery of system losses by electric providers.

Approval of this measure is earnestly sought.
