EXPLANATORY NOTE

The Constitution mandates the State to protect and promote the right to health of the people (Article II, Section 15) and to undertake appropriate health human resource development responsive to the country's needs and problems (Articles XIII, Section 12).

Moreover, the Philippines joined the other countries at the 1978 Alma Ata Conference in USSR in adopting the Primary Health Care Approach to providing health service.

At present, however, lack of proper dental health practices of the general population continues to be a national concern.

Almost entire communities in the country suffer from two of the most prevalent of dental diseases: Tooth decay and gum diseases. 92% of Filipino are suffering from dental caries while 78% has gum diseases. The magnitude of the dental problem is reflected in its being the highest in the morbidity picture of the country. In economic terms, every tooth affected means the loss of productivity of two days, lost opportunities, recurring pain and severe discomfort as well as increased cost of dental treatments.

The bill proposes to create a dental unit in each of the 2,266 as of 2005 rural health units as part of the human resource development to meet the needs of the Primary Health Care strategy in the delivery of health services.

At present, there are 881 rural health dentists in plantilla of the Department of Health distributed in the twelve regions. By providing for one dentist position in each of the 2,266 rural health units under the Department of Health, the priority targets of dental health services - pre-school children, school children, pregnant and non-pregnant mothers and adults - will be adequately served. It will cost more in their services, but the benefits to be derived from their services will be tremendous. More children, mothers and adults can be properly attended to. With a dentist at every rural health unit, the ratio of dentist to the population will approach the standard ratio of 1:20,000 population, similar to that of physician.

In view of the foregoing, the passage of the bill is strongly recommended.
