S. NO. 833

EXPLANATORY NOTE

It has been a normal practice in the food industry to be strict in the disposal of their excess productions. In the fast food chain, the allowable shelf life of their food merchandise before the same is thrown in the garbage bag, averages between ten to fifteen minutes. This is in spite of the very fact that it can still last and be safe for human consumption in the following day. Shelf life of food sold in the fast food only guarantees the peak level of its freshness while the food is actually far from spoilage.

However, due to fear of causing undue injury or harm to others and consequently facing legal actions due to food poisoning and other related health hazards, it has become a norm in the industry to throwaway excess food products instead of giving it away even for their own employees to take home. Considering that there are thousands of restaurants, fast food chains, bakeries, markets, hotels and similar establishments all over the country who are constantly disposing of their daily excesses, it can be accurately said that we are practically throwing away tons of food enough to feed millions of people suffering from and dying of starvation.

Seventy percent (70%) of the country's population is under the poverty level. This alone indicates that millions of Filipinos are miserably scrounging for food anywhere just to survive. Consequently, this state of starvation and undernourishment makes the populace unhealthy, thus, the government needs all the support it can get to protect its citizenry from the devastating effect of disease caused by malnourishment.

The same is true with pharmaceutical products. Expiration date stamped on medicines is usually over-stated and inaccurate. It has been claimed by most medical practitioners that the same still has three (3) months grace period before the medical product can be considered ineffective, and yet drug stores already dispose of these expired products even before the said grace period.

This proposed measure which will provide immunity from suit to donors of medicines, food and other supplies will definitely encourage all the good Samaritans (both local and foreign) to answer the government's call for support and assistance.

In view of the foregoing, the immediate passage of this measure is earnestly sought.
