First Regular Session

Senate

SENATE

Senate Bill No. 883

RECEIVED BY: Ji

INTRODUCED BY SEN. JINGGOY EJERCITO ESTRADA

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The Constitution, Article XIII, Section 11 mandates the States to give priority to the needs of women. To carry out this mandate, the State should undertake appropriate research focusing on women's health which shall be responsive to their needs and activities.

Women have peculiar needs. They are more exposed to diseases and danger as they get pregnant and give birth. Studies show that women who give birth are more susceptible to pregnancy-related and childbirth-related complications, especially if the women are either too young or too old, or if the pregnancies and child bearing have been too many or closely spaced.

Because of the responsibilities of women in this society, they have heavier and more tiring workloads. Women, aside from doing income-generating work, also have to perform such other responsibilities as child rearing, community work and housework, which often fall solely on them. Hence, there is probability that they get tired more and so may have lower resistance to infections.

Taking into account the role women play in the society, this bill seeks to establish the Office of Research on Women's Health which shall conduct research on women's health and shall provide the appropriate and quality care to women.

In view hereof, the early passage of this proposed measure is highly recommended.
