EXPLANATORY NOTE

Consumer rights serve not only to protect citizens from unscrupulous practices of erring businesses, moreover it is our belief that strengthening these rights will also lead to more consumer confidence and thus more robust consumer spending—a prime driver of our economy.

In this regard, the use of credit cards by consumers has become wider over the years. However, this has not been without its challenges. In particular, it has been the practice of some merchandising stores and service establishments to charge a different, albeit higher price, for items bought using credit cards; or to limit bargain sale items and services to those made with cash purchases. This means that merchants are passing on the cost of processing fees charged to them by credit card companies to the consumers.

This not only burdens consumers, but in fact discriminates against those who cannot pay in cash upon purchase. But whether or not a consumer chooses to pay in cash or charge, he or she should only pay the price indicated in the price tag - no distinction should be made as to the mode of payment. Such is the right of the consumer.

This measure is thus being proposed to level the playing field. While we acknowledge the right of big businesses to take the necessary steps to ensure profitability, this should never be taken to mean that consumers shall bear the burden of these enterprises in doing business. The consumer, as they say, is king. This measure intends to help big businesses understand and accept this fact.

In light of the foregoing, urgent passage of this bill is proposed.
