EXPLANATORY NOTE

For centuries, the communities living in the Philippines and in China have had extensive ties built primarily on the basis of trade and commerce. These linkages were further strengthened by the gradual assimilation of ethnic Chinese with the local population following intermarriages among them. This is evidenced by the ancestry of the country's revolutionary heroes and prominent personalities such as Jose Rizal and Vicente Lim.

At present, the ethnic Chinese and the Filipinos with Chinese ancestry make up around 1.3% and 22%, respectively of the country's population. The Filipino-Chinese as they are more known have played a key role in the economic and cultural development of the Philippines. Their known acumen in entrepreneurship and solidarity with their host country—as expressed in their volunteer organizations, have continued to strengthen ties among various communities.

This bill seeks to recognize the immeasurable contribution of the Filipino Chinese community in our country and strengthen the Filipino-Chinese amity by declaring the day on which the Chinese New Year falls each year as a non-working Holiday throughout the entire Philippines.
