EXPLANATORY NOTE

A sexually transmitted disease (STD) or venereal disease (VD), is an illness that has a significant probability of transmission between humans or animals by means of sexual contact, including vaginal intercourse, oral sex, and anal sex. Increasingly, the term sexually transmitted infection (STI) is used, as it has a broader range of meaning; a person may be infected, and may potentially infect others, without showing signs of disease. Some STIs can also be transmitted via use of an IV drug needle after its use by an infected person, as well as through childbirth or breastfeeding. Some common STDs include HIV (human immunodeficiency virus), Gonorrhea and Syphilis. HIV attacks the body's T-cells, and which damages the body's ability to fight off invading germs and disease. People with HIV become more susceptible to other infections and they may get certain types of cancer that a healthy body would normally be able to fight off. This weakened immunity (or immune deficiency) is known as AIDS and can result in severe life-threatening infections, some forms of cancer. Gonorrhea may cause sterility, arthritis, or heart problems if untreated. Women may develop pelvic inflammatory disease (infection of the reproductive organs that can cause infertility) and men may develop epididymis (inflammation of testicular tubes). Syphilis, if untreated, damage caused during later stages cannot be undone. Untreated syphilis may damage the nervous system, heart, brain, or other organs, and in some cases cause death.

The 1987 Constitution, Article 2, Section 15, provides:

Section 15. The State shall protect and promote the right to health of the people and instill health consciousness among them.

Further, we are a state party to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (ICESCR). Under Article 12 of this treaty, our obligations include the following:

Article 12.

1. The States Parties to the present Covenant recognize the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health.

2. The steps to be taken by the States Parties to the present Covenant to achieve the full realization of this right shall include those necessary for:

(c) The prevention, treatment and control of epidemic, endemic, occupational and other diseases;

This bill requires the Department of Health and local health departments to provide information to the public and health care professionals about the health consequences of untreated sexually transmitted diseases; medical options for treatment of sexually transmitted diseases; and services and medical benefits that are available for treatment of sexually transmitted diseases. In addition to this a government-sponsored website will be provided to help minimize the risks of STDs and to make medical support accessible and available to anyone needing help.

This bill is meant to complement R.A. No. 8504 which concentrates on the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS, as well as existing programs of the DOH on the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS and STIs.*
