Senate Bill No. 1502

BY:

INTRODUCED BY SEN. JINGGOY EJERCITO ESTRADA

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The country is besieged by a multitude of problems but none as tremendous as the critical condition of our educational system today: the staggering shortage in classrooms, school facilities and educational materials, the shortage of teachers in public schools, and the dismal performance of our students. In the midst of a food crisis and skyrocketing prices of basic commodities, schoolchildren from the poorest families face the threat of hunger or malnutrition even as the government has resorted to allocating food subsidies.

Given the scarce resources of the national government, there is a need to be innovative in our approach in harnessing investments for education and health modernization programs. Only recently, the National Telecommunications Commission explored the possibility of lowering access charges between telecommunication companies for text messaging or short messaging service (SMS). This bill proposes that instead of merely lowering the cost of communication through lowered access charges, current rates should be maintained but with the government collecting half of the revenues, to be used to fund critical programs for acceleration of education and health standards in the country. At the same time, the economy is pump-primed with much needed investments.

For these purposes, this bill seeks to create the Health and Education Acceleration Program (HEAP) Corporation, a government corporation to spearhead the rehabilitation and acceleration of education and health infrastructure in the country. Under the HEAP, every commercial mobile service provider shall be required to remit to the HEAP Fund half or 50% of its net revenue earnings arising from local text messages. These funds shall be earmarked for the construction of classrooms, computer and science laboratories, clean cafeterias and school facilities for schoolchildren's wholistic development, acquisition of books, desks, chairs and instruction materials, hiring of teachers, regular conduct of teacher-training programs and augmentation of teachers' pay provision of scholarship grants to deserving students; establishment of school clinics with dental equipment and a regular staff nurse; and school feeding and vaccination programs. For these reasons, the passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
