Senate Bill No. 2639

RECEIVED BY: J

Introduced by SENATOR SONNY ANGARA

AN ACT
DECLARING EVERY 26TH OF JUNE OF EVERY YEAR
AS PHILIPPINES-FRANCE FRIENDSHIP DAY

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Philippine-French relations go as far back as the age of discovery and exploration. When he embarked on his epochal mission to discover the route to the Spice Islands, Ferdinand Magellan had 15 Frenchmen among his crew. In the Christianization of the Philippines, some of the religious who served in the country came from France, as well as other nations allied with the rulers of Spain. The seminary of St. Clement in Manila, the first Diocesan seminary in the Philippines, was established with the help of French Monsignor Charles-Thomas Maillard de Tournon in 1704.

Aside from serving as missionaries, other French residents of the Philippines served as traders, technicians, soldiers, and officers and crews of the Manila Galleon.

By the 17th century, France began to take notice of the Philippines for its strategic location for trade. It was the French who discovered the potential of the abaca plant in the manufacture of ropes used in the shipping industry.

French residents and travelers produced interesting accounts of the Philippines. Writing in 1818, French explorer Gabriel Lafond was captivated by the beauty and potential of Manila Bay. French navigator and geographer Dumont d'Urville visited Jolo and offered gifts to the sultan in May 1828.

Paris figured prominently in the intellectual life of a number of prominent Filipinos. Trinidad Pardo de Tavera published El Sanscrito en la Lengua Tagalog in 1883. The painters Juan Luna and Felix Resurrecion Hidalgo did many of their works in France. The Philippine government has installed a marker on the site of the atelier of Juan Luna in boulevard Arago (14th arrondissement in Paris).

Rizal lived in Paris which he described as an "intellectual city par excellence" during the summer of 1883, then in 1885 and in 1887 and finally in 1889 to 1891 where he worked with a French ophthalmologist, Louis de Wecker. A historical marker has been installed in 124 Rue de Rennes to commemorate the stay of Rizal in Paris.

The greatest contribution of France lay in its revolutionary history and free social environment which inspired Filipino nationalism and our heroes. While living in Paris, Rizal annotated Antonio de Morga's Sucesos de las Islas Filipinas which corrected the Spanish biases against Filipinos. It was also here that Rizal and other reformists formed a group called the "Indios Bravos" which advocated redeeming the honor of the Filipino race.

During the centennial of the French Revolution in 1889, Rizal sought to organize a conference of scholars working in the Philippines to come to Paris. It was during this conference that an association called Association Internationale des Philippinistes was to be launched with Ferdinand Blumentritt as president and Edmond Plauchut as vice president.

Both Filipino reformists and revolutionists imbibed French liberal ideas of liberty, equality and fraternity. Rizal's novels Noli Me Tangere and El Filibusterismo were inspired by Alexander Dumas, one of France's great literary giants. Andres Bonifacio was heavily inspired by the French Revolution. Both he and Emilio Jacinto, the Brains of the Katipunan subscribed to the ideas of Jean Jacques Rousseau, Montesquieu and Napoleon Bonaparte, especially on the universal rights of man. These ideals of liberty, equality and fraternity are represented in the equilateral white triangle of the Philippine flag.

On June 26, 1947 the Philippines and France signed a Treaty of Amity, which established diplomatic relations between these two countries. Underlying this alliance is a historical and cultural background between the Philippines and France.

In view of the foregoing, this bill seeks to declare the 26th of June of every year as Philippines-France Friendship Day to remember and celebrate the shared history and friendship between the Philippines and France.
