AN ACT
CREATING THE NATIONAL COMMISSION ON DISABILITY AFFAIRS,
DEFINING ITS POWERS, FUNCTIONS AND RESPONSIBILITIES AND
APPROPRIATING FUNDS THEREFOR AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Article XIII, Section 1 of the 1987 Philippine Constitution provides that “[t]he Congress shall give highest priority to the enactment of measures that protect and enhance the right of all the people to human dignity, reduce social, economic, and political inequalities, and remove cultural inequities by equitably diffusing wealth and political power for the common good.”

Given the various social, physical, and economic challenges that the Persons with Disabilities (PWD) sector face, policies on PWDs should be geared towards a rights-based approach to disability that provides a comprehensive understanding of disability; obligates the State to address the needs of PWDs by strengthening accountability; and upholds the full participation of the PWDs in society. These will entail the transformation of existing structures into systems that will be inclusive to PWDs.

Despite copious laws safeguarding the welfare of the PWDs, many still do not have access to basic needs such as healthcare, education, employment, and the proper interventions required of their disability. Relative to people without disabilities, the former can be more prone to economic deprivation because of three main reasons: First, PWDs have lower earning capacity. Second, expenses attributable to disability create an extra drain on resources, and Third, assistance and caring by other family members can reduce available household labor. <sup>1</sup>

As of date, there is no single, comprehensive database on PWDs in the Philippines, thus, the need to establish one. While the Census provides a figure for the PWD population, other data sources have different estimates. This shows how the PWD sector is often given low priority and/or is even completely excluded from official statistics. This is evident on the exclusion of the PWD sector in the CENSUS conducted by the Philippine Statistics Authority (PSA) in 2015.<sup>2</sup> This, despite the Philippines being a signatory to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of PWDs (UNCPRD) which, under Article 31 thereof, directs State parties to “collect appropriate information, including statistical and research data” on disability.<sup>3</sup>

The last official survey on PWDs in the Philippines was conducted in 2010 which pegged the number of PWDs at 16 for every 1,000 Filipinos. The survey showed that of the 92.1 million household population in the country, 1,443,000 or 1.57 percent had disability. It also said that 3 out of every 5 PWDs belong to the working age group. (PSA, 2013)<sup>4</sup>

In addition, based on the result of the LISTAHANAN second round of assessment implemented in 2015 by the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) covering 5.5 million targeted poor families or 28.7 million people, 1.1% of the total targeted poor population or 313,574 are persons with disability.<sup>5</sup>

The lack of a comprehensive prevalence study on disability and significant demographic and socio-economic information on the sector could be one of the hindrances to the adoption of policies and programs that address the rights of PWDs.

It also remains to be one of the major challenges towards disability inclusion in the society and the economy.

This bill seeks to establish the National Commission for Disability Affairs, in replacement of the National Council for Disability Affairs. As a Commission, it shall be able to further strengthen its role as the primary agency responsible for the implementation of policies aimed at fulfilling the rights of the PWD sector.

The Commission shall address the lack of comprehensive data on PWDs which is the vital key for policy formulation, by leading the conduct of a National Registration Program for Persons with Disabilities through the Philippine Statistics Authority, upon which guidelines will be provided in consultation with partner agencies such as the Department of Health, and other experts in the field.

The Commission will also oversee and recommend measures for the effective conduct of a comprehensive assessment program on a provincial, city and municipal level, again in consultation with partner agencies such as the Department of Health and other experts in the field.

The National Commission for Persons with Disabilities shall also serve as the main research arm of the government on PWD concerns and central repository of data on the sector.

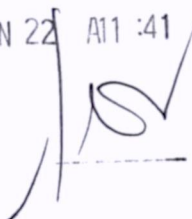

The establishment of the Commission aims to address the following gaps:

- (a) The need for more inclusionary/enabling measures to fulfil the multi-dimensional needs of PWDs beyond schooling, to include their work productivity and well-being;
- (b) Conduct of a prevalence study to ensure that there is a clear demographic profile of PWDs in the country according to disability type, age and other aspects. The absence of this study may be hindering the passage of bills to build on current milestones; and
- (c) A rights-based approach to disability that recognizes that the barriers hindering PWDs from enjoying their rights are not their disabilities, but attitudinal and environmental barriers created by society, such as discriminatory policies and practices. A rights-based approach will focus on the elimination of these barriers.

As it seeks to address the aforementioned gaps, the Commission will be mandated to uphold the rights and welfare of the Persons with Disabilities sector through its larger and stronger capacity to monitor the implementation of programs and policies on disability, identify the needs of the sector, and recommend policy measures to address such needs.

Persons with Disabilities should have stronger protection under the law and ensuring their protection starts with raising awareness of their rights as citizens, and as citizens with special needs.
