EXPLANATORY NOTE

The presence of Filipinos in other countries is certainly not miniscule. As of December 2013, the Commission on Filipino Overseas estimated that there are around 10.2 million<sup>1</sup> Filipinos overseas, mostly as migrant workers; and their numbers are constantly growing. The latest statistics show that around 2 million Filipinos<sup>2</sup> leave the country every year to work abroad, carrying their auspicious hopes and dreams to amply provide for their families and secure a brighter future. Rather than remain in the country eking out a living and earning a measly income, many choose to live away from their loved ones and endure tough working conditions for higher wages and salaries.

The contribution of the Filipinos working overseas to the Philippine economy is likewise not miniscule. The Filipino migrant workers have been consistent dollar earners for the country. Their remittances are considered a significant contributor to the country's gross domestic product, and their role in keeping the economy buoyant is well acknowledged. Based on the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) figures, the cash remittances in 2018 sent via the formal banking networks by overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) amounted to $ 28.94 billion, while their personal remittances or those fund transfers that were not captured by the banking sector for the same year amounted to $ 32.21 billion.<sup>3</sup>

In keeping with the constitutional guarantee of giving full protection to labor, local and overseas alike<sup>4</sup>, the government has established the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) and the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) in order to protect and enforce the welfare and rights of our Filipino migrant workers. However, despite the presence of the POEA and OWWA, even taking into account the assistance provided by the Department of Foreign Affairs, quite a number of our Filipino overseas still see that they are being neglected by government. There are reports of numerous complaints and resentment towards government harbored by overseas Filipino workers apparently brought about by the perceived government's delayed and inadequate support and assistance while they are facing difficult predicaments abroad.

Considering the foregoing, I submit that it is timely and appropriate to create a government agency in the executive Department, aptly called the Department of Migration and Development, which shall have the exclusive function of essentially protecting the welfare and enforcing the rights of our Filipinos overseas. Hence, this measure will transfer POEA and OWWA as attached agencies, and other related agencies that deals with OFW affairs, to the newly created Department thereby empowering this Department to adequately support and give assistance to our Filipinos overseas.

Henceforth, I recommend the immediate approval of this bill.
