S. B. No. 36

Introduced by Senator Biazon

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Section 2 of the UDHA provides that the State shall “undertake, in cooperation with the private sector, a comprehensive and continuing Urban Development and Housing Program.” To ensure the achievement of the objectives of this Program, Section 6 called for the formulation of a comprehensive plan for urban and urbanizable areas. Under this comprehensive plan the following responsibilities were given to the Local Government Units (LGUs): (1) inventory of lands for socialized housing (Section 7); (2) identification of sites for socialized housing (Section 8); (3) registration of socialized housing beneficiaries (Section 17) and; (4) monitoring of compliance by developers of the twenty percent (20%) balanced housing provision under Section 18.

However, 14 years have passed since the passage of the UDHA and we still do not have a national registry of socialized housing beneficiaries. Many of our LGUs have also failed to do the three other functions that have been given them under the UDHA.

Clearly, there is a need for a specialized body in our LGUs that shall ensure the faithful and proactive execution of housing programs at the local level. A void at the local level in the form of a mechanism to hasten the delivery of shelter services to our people, especially those who need it most, needs to be filled up.

Also, according to the “World Urbanization Prospects: The 2001 Revision” by the UN Population Division, half of our country’s population are living in urban centers. With an urban population growth rate of 5.14 percent per year, the Philippines has one of the highest rates in the world.

A World Bank Study in 2000 projected that the country may have as many as 600 urban centers by 2020. The implication of this is that this high urbanization rate, if not managed properly, will exert tremendous pressure on the already scarce resources in these places. This could only lead to a decline in the delivery of quality basic services – housing being one of them. One only has to look under bridges and the ever growing informal settlements in danger areas to realize that we are now experiencing this malady.

It is envisioned that this proposed measure will provide an administrative machinery at the local level to effect the full implementation of the UDHA as well as cope with the fast pace of urbanization of the country.

Another reason for the passage of this bill is that there is also a need to institutionalize multi-sectoral representation in local housing initiatives. This is premised on the fact that the success of these programs will, to a large extent, depend on the direct participation and cooperation of the stakeholders in the planning and implementation process. By this we mean that the people who are going to be affected or benefited by such projects should be given a voice in the planning and implementation of such projects.

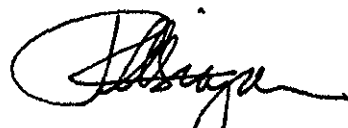

Many experts have opined that many of the government's housing projects have failed due to the fact that proper consultation among the stakeholders, the beneficiaries included, were never conducted in the first place. The government conceptualized and provided relocation sites without consulting the people who were going to be transferred.

In the process, many were displaced of their livelihood; schooling of children was interrupted; local government units where these informal settlers were going to be relocated refused them; and many untoward incidents occurred while these people were being relocated. If we make a survey of those who are presently residing in government housing projects, it will not be surprising to find out that they are not the original beneficiaries of these projects.

This situation pervades notwithstanding the fact that under Section 14 of the UDHA, it is illegal for these beneficiaries to sell, alienate, convey, encumber or lease these properties. All because of ill-conceived projects that were undertaken without proper consultation.

By giving all the stakeholders a voice and participation in the planning and implementation of housing initiatives at the local level, these problems would hopefully be abated.

Lastly, passage of this bill is earnestly sought as it recognizes local autonomy and the reality that each locality has its own peculiarities and priorities. Thus, it should be in a better position to address its problems using its available resources at the local level and with some help from the national government.
