EXPLANATORY NOTE

The history of "Arnis de Mano" also known as "Kali or Escrima" in the Philippines can be traced way before the arrival of the first Galleon ships in the Archipelago. The first recorded account of the practice of "Arnis" reveals that it is primarily used by natives for tribal combats. It has been called by different names during the time such as kali or kabaroan in Ilocos, pagkalikali in Cagayan, kalirongan in Pangasinan, kaliradman in Samar and Leyte, and estocado or esgrima in Bicol.

During the Spanish occupation, "Arnis" evolved as a sport coming in three variations: espada y daga (sword and dagger) which uses a long and short stick; solobaton, or single stick; and sinawali, which uses two sticks and employing movements similar to sawali weave. Some of our national heroes like Jose Rizal, Andres Bonifacio, Antonio Luna, Gregorio del Pilar, and Gregorio Aglipay were known to be practitioners of "Arnis".

Because of the intricate use and danger of "Arnis", which is one of the main weapons of our forefathers in the battle of Mactan where Portuguese explorer Ferdinand Magellan was killed, Spanish authorities in 1596 discouraged its practice.

All these historical accounts imply that "Arnis" really originated in the Philippines. Renowned encyclopedias refer to "Arnis" as Filipino Martial Arts. Similar native sports in other Asian countries like Korea's Taekwondo, Thailand's Muay Thai, and Japan's Judo, to name a few, have become internationally accepted sports.

This bill simply seeks to make "Arnis" as the Philippines' National Sport. The game of "Sipa" also known as "Sepak Takraw" and recognized as the national sport of our country, originated in Malaysia dating back to the 15th century.

"Arnis" as competitive sports is now starting to make waves internationally as more and more countries are starting to practice it. This native sport in fact made its debut in the international sports competition after it was included as one of the regular medal sports in the recently concluded 23rd Southeast Asian Games held in the Philippines.

Its goal of penetrating a higher level in international sports competitions like the Asian Games and hopefully the world Olympics will be a milestone in Philippine Sports since our expertise in the craft of "Arnis de Mano" will elevate our standing as among the world's best.

The favorable passage of this bill is earnestly requested.
