SENATE
S. B. No. 1294

RECEIVED BY: [Signature]

Introduced by Senator Miriam Defensor Santiago

EXPLANATORY NOTE

There is an increasing public concern on the failure of the civil service to cope with technological strides, particularly in computerization of government offices. The lag is not only due to the lack of computers, but also in the absence or lack of personnel technically proficient to operate computers, or both.

This bill seeks to place our civil service at par with the private sector in the use of computer technology. All clerical, technical, supervisory, and even executive officers and employees of the government, who are professional or non-professional civil service eligibles, will be required to undergo basic training in computer and technology.*
