EXPLANATORY NOTE

It is in the public interest for business enterprises owned by minorities and women to participate in procurement contracts of all providers of telecommunications services. The opportunity in our free enterprise system by minorities and women is essential if this nation is to attain social and economic equality.

Business enterprises can be improved through the development by the providers of telecommunications services of substantial long-range and annual goals, which are supported by training and technical assistance, for the purchase to the maximum practicable extent of technology, equipment, supplies, services and materials from minority business enterprises. Procurement policies which include participation of business enterprises that are owned by minorities and women also benefit the communication industry and its consumers by encouraging the expansion of the number of suppliers for procurement, thereby encouraging competition among suppliers and promoting economic efficiency in the process.*
