
Introduced by Senator Loren Legarda

EXPLANATORY NOTE

This bill seeks to institute continuing reforms in land administration and management through the integration of land administration powers and functions into a single government agency for expediency and cost-efficiency and to provide structural and technological changes that will enable transparency and accessibility with the primary objective of advancing equity and full utilization and development of land resources.

Section 21, Article II of the 1987 Philippine Constitution provides that the State shall promote comprehensive rural development and agrarian reform. In the Philippine history, it was manifested in a number of faces, from the time of American rule to the popular and prevailing Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP) and its off-springs. There is no question with its positive effects of land reform; numerous studies confirm its positive relationship with poverty alleviation, locally and internationally. However, land administration proves to be the cap of the bottle in land reform. Without effective land administration, its translation to development and sound management of land and land resources won't be facilitated. Thus, it is important to pinpoint the issues that surround the current set-up of land administration that hinder such.

These issues are comprised largely of the defects of the implementing arm of the government and partly by absent complementary laws that will enable a more efficient land administration system. These issues cause inefficiencies (e.g. extensive delays in the disposition and titling of alienable and disposable lands, inaccurate incomplete land information and records, duplicate and fake titles, etc.) that delimit the system in its service-delivery as well as the public participation, thus constraining economic development.

Thus, there is a need of a legislation that will streamline the framework and the processes to address the issues specifically,

- Overlapping, inconsistent and outdated land-related laws
- Overlapping tenurial instruments in public lands
- Disjointed policies, rules and regulations, cumbersome procedures, and dysfunctional structures
- Inappropriate land classification for planning and development
- Bureaucratic land administrative systems and procedures

In line with the Medium-Term Philippine Development Plan 2004-2010, Land Administration Reform Act (LARA) of 2007 serves to respond to such concerns.

Among the salient features this bill includes:

1. Creation of Land Administration Authority (LAA) - an agency under the Office of the President responsible for land administration and public land management with the following general powers and functions:
 - a. Land Survey and Mapping - update, complete, and manage nationwide cadastral surveys, topographic mapping and the record system; prescribe rules, regulations, and standards, and verify, approve, and coordinate with pertinent agencies and institutions regarding land consolidation and titling process;
 - b. Land registration - conducts registration; compile, manages, and maintains the custodial and storage system especially the master list of spurious land titles and tenure instruments;
 - c. Public Land Administration - administer, manage and/or dispose of all alienable lands of the public domain in coordination with local government units and other agencies;
 - d. Land records and information technology - establish and maintain an open system for public access; determine fees, fines, and penalties; act as Secretariat;
2. Creation of Land Adjudication Board (LAB) - the quasi-judicial body of the LAA that has exclusive original jurisdiction on all matters involving the implementation of laws, rules, and regulations on land administration and public land management;
3. Creation of a Congressional Oversight Committee on the Land Reform Act.

LARA seeks to institute continuing reforms in land administration and management in order to optimize and rationalize their contribution to the goals of national development, tenure security, eradication of poverty, and attainment of social, economic, and cultural justice.

The bill's immediate enactment will ensure recognition of the Philippines to the global efforts for sustainable development while providing improved access to land for the majority of the Filipino people.

In view of the foregoing, immediate passage of this bill is earnestly requested.
