EXPLANATORY NOTE

A government maintains the allegiance and support of the citizens by keeping them informed on matters affecting their interest and well-being. Without it, the reservoir of public trust dries up, and government soon enough loss the basis of popular support, and cannot be maintained except against the people's will.

For this reason, the Bill of Rights provides: "The right of the people to information on matters of public concern shall be recognized. Access to official records, and to documents and papers pertaining to official acts, transactions, or decisions, as well as to government research data used as basis for policy development, shall be afforded the citizen subject to such limitations as may be provided by law." Upon this right is anchored the basic right of the citizens to be informed of the process and decisions made by the government in the process of governance.

Without transparency and proper information, the future of the nation is left solely in the hands of public officials and decision makers at the expense of utilizing the active participatory process of governance provided under the Constitution. Without it, public officers are unduly emboldened in the belief that their actions, even when wrong and injurious to the public interest, could be screened away from public knowledge. By guaranteeing the citizen access to official records, documents and papers pertaining to official acts, transactions and decisions of the government, the Filipino people have actively participated in the decision-making and legitimizing process of governance.

Moreover, in this process, public officers are also made more keenly aware of their accountability to the public. Yet even the freest and most open government requires a measure of secrecy for some of the things it does to enable it to carry out its duties more effectively than if everything were promptly disclosed in the marketplace.

The security and defense of the State from internal subversion and external threats, the stability of its currency and reserves, and the preservation of law and order often require the adoption of certain measures which lose their effect in the glare of publicity, and which therefore are best covered by the mantle of secrecy, so that the government may be able to secure the best advantage to the national interest. The security and defense of the nation would be severely impaired if anyone who might wish to do it ham had free access to official information relating to security and defense.

Still, under the pretext of keeping certain information secret, a government may become over-secretive and keep secret even those which it has no just reason to keep secret. The national interest is harmed as much by indiscriminate disclosure as by excessive secrecy. This proposed measure, therefore, enhances the free flow of information and the formation of a vigorous, free and enlightened public opinion, while paying proper regard to the need to protect official information pertaining to national security.

In view of the foregoing concerns, the early approval of this bill is being earnestly sought.

RAMON BONG REVILLA, JR.
