EXPLANATORY NOTE

The participation of the youth in critical decision-making processes is a crucial component of nation building. If the country were to chart its course as a politically and economically dynamic and thriving nation, it is important to encourage youth involvement in both public and civic affairs.

Since the Philippines is a very young country, with majority of the population belonging to the youth sector, it is imperative that government programs and policies should always take into account their impact on the youth, if only to guarantee their successful implementation.

The proposed measure, as it seeks to create local youth development councils in every city and municipality, hopes to achieve this end. In fact, its objectives are more or less designed along this line:

- a) To develop and harness the full potential of the youth as responsible partners in nation-building;
- b) To encourage intensive and active participation of youth in all government and non-government programs, projects and activities affecting them;
- c) To harmonize all government and non-government initiatives or the development of youth sector; and
- d) To supplement government appropriations for youth promotion and development with funds from other sources;

While existing laws for the youth, such as R.A. 8044, a.k.a Youth in Nation Building Act, and other youth development mechanisms are set in place and are in fact implemented, the growing complexities of problems relating to the youth and their seeming diversities in terms of educational background, work experience and societal upbringing necessitate the creation of local councils to fully reach out to them.

The National Youth Commission, albeit the noble efforts expended, encounters difficulties discharging its functions being the sole government agency pursuing the gargantuan task of formulating and implementing youth development initiatives. Through these local councils, the commission would be able to facilitate programs and policies for the youth even down to the grassroots level, meeting their needs and engaging them as active participants in public and civic activities.

The bill, more than anything else, embodies the constitutional mandate to promote and protect the well-being of the youth. Hence, its immediate passage is earnestly sought.
