Senate Bill No. 856

RECEIVED BY:

INTRODUCED BY SEN. JINGGOY EJERCITO ESTRADA

EXPLANATORY NOTE

"Money is what fuelled the industrial society. But in the informational society, the fuel, the power, is knowledge."

J.K. Galbraith

The media has proven itself to be a potent tool on nation building. Not only does it serve as a link between our people in this archipelagic country; it also serves as a vital source of information, both good and bad, to our people, thereby making it a mold of societal values and ideals.

As such, great importance must be given not only to the nature of information that media broadcast to the public, but more so to the source of this information – the media practitioners. After all, media practitioners serve as a gate keepers in the information highway, determining the nature of information that is communicated to the people.

This bill seeks to provide welfare benefits such as a group health insurance and disability insurance to free-lance media practitioners, the communication sector most in need of assistance, by augmenting the present functions of the Philippine Information Agency (PIA), stated in Executive Order 100, to include such benefits.

It is hoped that such a measure would encourage free-lance media practitioners to be strong advocates of human development, poverty eradication and rural development; discourage wrong practices such as a skewed, biased and sensational reporting. With the passage of this bill, they will now enjoy some amount of security; encourage them to engage in development-oriented or development support communication activities; and significantly expand and enrich PIA's services to communication professionals.

In safeguarding the people's right to accurate and reliable information, the passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
